CLOSED INCIDENT.

Since the last issue of the Kentucky Irish American Col. James P. Whallen has withdrawn his offer to build a statue of his deceased brother, Col. John H. Whallen, in Shawnee Park. Col. Whallen's offer was accepted by unanimous vote by the members of the Park Board, was publicly indorsed by Mayor Buschmeyer and other leading citizens, and would undoubtedly have been gladly received by the people who use that park. Opposition arising, however, in the ranks of those who constantly seek advancement by appealing to religious prejudice, Col. Whallen promptly withdrew his offer, preferring to take that course rather than permit his brother's name to be used for the motives proposed.

The Kentucky Irish American has a good deal in mind that it would like to say about this matter and which could be said with propriety, but we have received a request from Col. Whallen that we refrain from making the matter a subject of controversy and confine ourselves to merely mentioning the fact of the withdrawal of the offer. In taking this position Col. Whallen adheres to the course he originally mapped out for himself, namely that he will not personally take any step calculated to stir up religious feeling in Louisville and that he will urge all of his friends to follow his example. Under these circumstances we have decided to follow the advice of Col. Whallen and treat this matter as a closed incident.

STILL SAFE.

The Irish Nationalists scored a decided victory Wednesday, when the House of Commons rejected the Unionist amendment to the address from the throne, which called for the abandonment of the home rule bill until that measure had been submitted to the judgment of the country. The Government had a majority of eighty-eight. Despite Bonar Law's prediction of civil war there is every indication of a peaceable settlement and passage of the bill.

HOSPITAL OPENING.

The new City Hospital has had an auspicious opening and is now in full operation. This institution, one of the most improved and best managed in the country, reflects the highest credit upon Superintendent J. W. Fowler, the Hospital Commissioners and the city government. Modern in every detail, here the sick and injured will receive the care and attention that becomes a Christian community. Our hospital is a credit to Louisville and Kentucky, and with Dr. Fowler at its head there is every assurance that its affairs will be conducted in a manner satisfactory to its unfortunate inmates and the general public.

APPROVES PATIENCE.

Our contemporary, the Omaha True Voice, edited by Rev. Peter Gannon, speaks true when it says A. P. A. is not an unmixer of evil. When the fever of fanaticism had passed it was seen that the church had lost nothing, but on the contrary had gained much in the revival of faith among careless Catholics and in the higher esteem of thinking men, who watched the waves of bigotry harmlessly beat against the church founded by Christ. It is true that any attempt to annihilate religious prejudice results in unpleasantness for the time being. Individual Catholics—and even communities—may have to suffer injustice and irritating annoyances. But there are compensating features. Persecution purifies and strengthens the faithful as no other ordeal can. It is not persecution that we have to fear, but the deadening influence of indifference. We would rather that Catholics should be militant than indifferent; and we would rather meet militancy than blank indifference in those outside the fold.

"Oh, but they tell such horrible lies about us!" Yes, they do. But these will recoil on the heads of those who concoct them. Even calumnies give us an opportunity to explain the real Catholic doctrines and practices to inquirers. Is that nothing? Of course if we can not explain, the opportunity is lost; but the fault is ours. We should be able to explain our religion intelligently to those not of the fold. Non-Catholics judge our religion largely by the lives of Catholics whom they know. The inventions of "lecturers" and anti-Catholic publications do not deceive as many as we may suppose. Only let the lives of Catholics be blameless and they need not fear the tongue of calumny. We often think that good effort is wasted in refuting old calumnies and answering notoriety-seeking "lecturers." The "lecturers" are out for what money they can get. They are only too anxious to get into controversy with respectable people. It gives them a standing that they would not otherwise have in the communities which they visit. We need not be alarmed over the antics of these disturbers. They give us an opportunity to know our friends and also to know those who would harm us in the dark. That is worth something. Quiet observation is in order at the present time, rather than voluble expostulation against the nondescript bigots who are working themselves into a frenzy in their efforts to attract attention. We can afford to be patient, for we have nothing to fear from the attacks of malignant enemies.

HAVE NO NEED.

Friends of Ireland were elated over the recent dispatch from Dublin, which said the Trustees of the home rule fund are so confident of the home rule bill passing the House of Commons within the next few months that they have issued a formal notification, stating that no appeal for funds would be made this year either in the United States or elsewhere. Louisville has ever been generous to the Irish cause and would again have responded liberally had there been an appeal from the Trustees who control the fund.

The number of immigrants in Kentucky is small indeed, but this does not in any way affect or prevent illiteracy. According to a Government publication just issued in Washington there are in this State 208,084 illiterates who are ten years of age and over, of whom 146,797 are native whites, 3,300 are negroes. There are 87,516 illiterate males twenty-one years of age and over in Kentucky and only 33,582 in Indiana, where there is a large immigrant population.

The literacy test in the immigration bill is a dishonest sham, and none know this better than the men who are trying to foist it upon Congress. Unless amended, the Senate should reject the bill.

It is not too early to begin the annual campaign in opposition to the monkey-faced caricature and the green pig which some dealers imagine are appropriate souvenirs of St. Patrick's day.

Kentucky were better off were the Legislature to adjourn at once. Few members are earning their $10 per. Much of the proposed legislation would prove disastrous to the State.

When you would kill use your automobile. For those who take life in this manner there is no punishment in Louisville.

MENACE DISTRIBUTOR.

Editor Kentucky Irish American.
On behalf of the many Catholic patrons of the C. and O. railroad, I wish to enter my protest against the actions of a conductor on that road, who in his trips to Ashland has acted as a distributor for the Menace and the Peril, these two filthy A. P. A. sheets, which are even obnoxious to all fair-minded men of any religion. This conductor, whom I learned on inquiry is Edward Hughes, has made the boat in front of passengers on that road that he has secured hundreds of subscribers for the two cesspools of filth above named, and has not even discriminated in his distribution of these organs, Catholics and men with Catholic relatives being handed copies. I would suggest that a committee of Catholics wait on the officials of the C. and O. and inquire if persons of their faith are to be insulted by an employee of a road which is expected to receive support from all classes, regardless of their religious belief. The truth of these statements can be substantiated and can be borne out by a little investigation. Would suggest that the above Catholic hater be given more leisure time to pursue his efforts as a dispenser of A. P. A. literature.

RESPECTED.

Very Rev. Felix Varela, D. D.,
Pioneer Priest of New York.

Philosopher in Cuba and Representative to the Spanish Cortes.

Purchased Christ Church From Episcopalians For Bishop Dubois.

FOUNDED HALF-ORPHAN ASYLUM

Among the pioneer priests and most zealous collaborators with Bishop Dubois in the diocese of New York was the Very Rev. Felix Varela, D. D., whose death sixty-one years ago is noted in our Catholic chronology under date of February 18.

He spent the last thirty years of his life in New York, a devoted missionary, a founder of churches and an editor of publications for the defense of the faith, displaying an extraordinary charity and an unswerving zeal that made him universally loved and respected.

Father Varela was a Cuban, having been born in Havana, November 20, 1788. After his ordination in 1812 by Don Juan Jose Diaz Espada y Landa, the second Bishop of Havana, his conspicuous learning was recognized by an appointment to the chair of philosophy in the College of San Carlos in his native city.

Having friends in Philadelphia he paid a long visit to that city to perfect himself in English, and while there he published a Spanish periodical, El Habanero, which had a wide circulation among the Spanish residents and merchants of that city and New York. When master of English he removed to New York and was assigned as assistant at St. Peter's. At that time there were but three churches in the city, St. Peter's, St. Patrick's and St. Mary's, and Bishop Dubois found that a fourth one was sadly needed. The task of founding it he gave to Father Varela, who in March, 1827, purchased a vacant lot from the Episcopalians with his own funds and money advanced by his friends, the Spanish merchants. The church stood on Ann street then, and after the necessary alterations it was solemnly dedicated by Bishop Dubois on July 15 of the same year. The parish prospered from the beginning and from it sprang two other churches in a short time, the Church of the Transfiguration, then on Chambers street, and St. James' church, then and now on James street. Father Varela was the pastor of Christ church from its establishment until 1855, and from then until his death of the Transfiguration.

Although summoned to attend the first Provincial Council of Baltimore, which opened October 4, 1829, Bishop Dubois, having contemplated for some time a visit to Rome, sailed from New York the good ship De Rahm on September 29, leaving his diocese in charge of Fathers Varela and John Powers as Vicar General. It was then that Father Varela founded what was called the Half-Orphan Asylum as a refuge for children left with only one parent, the nucleus of the necessary funds being a gift of $500 from one of his devout parishioners.

With all his zealous activities he found time to defend the church, its doctrines and practices, which in those days of bigotry were assailed with a persistent venom. He published "The Protestant Abridger and Annotator" in 1839; the Catholic Expositor and Literary Magazine in 1841, to say nothing of his splendid defense of Catholicism in his "Letters to Elpidius," besides which he was a constant and able contributor to the New York Weekly Register and Catholic Diary, of which Father Joseph A. Schellner was the editor.

He was a resourceful conversationalist and his clear and logical writings commanded general attention. During his thirty years of active life in New York he had seen churches and institutions multiplied, the numbers of priests constantly growing and the progress of religion so marked that New York was made a Metropolitan see under Archbishop Hughes, with Bishop McCloskey, afterward Cardinal, as coadjutor. But toward the end his health began to fail and he was induced to take a rest in the more genial climate of Florida. He never returned, for he died in St. Augustine on February 18, 1853, attended in his last moments by Father Aubril, S. P. M.

Surviving her are four sisters, Misses Elizabeth, Rosella, Salile and Maggie Dougherty, and one brother, William Dougherty.

Michael Walsh, one of the oldest residents of Limerick, was called to his eternal reward Monday night, following a long illness and the infirmities of old age. He was born in Ireland eighty-three years ago, but had been a resident of Louisville since the close of the civil war. Besides his wife, who resides at 939 South Seventh street, several children survive him. The funeral was held from St. Louis Bertrand's church Wednesday morning.

Following an illness extending over two years, Thomas L. Corcoran, aged thirty-five, was released from his earthly suffering Monday morning at his home, 720 East Walnut street. Until his health failed he had been engaged in the grocery business and was widely known and respected. He is survived by his mother, Mrs. E. A. Corcoran, four sisters, Mrs. William A. Teel, Mrs. D. K. Frazier, Miss Nellie and Miss Virginia Corcoran, and two brothers, John J. Corcoran, of Louisville, and William C. Corcoran, of Chicago. Funeral services, with solemn mass of requiem celebrated by Father Schumann, were held Wednesday morning at St. John's church.
